COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

Saturday February, 16 1907.

D. E. O'KEEFE.....EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

The San Francisco Bulletin of last Tuesday contains an able editorial giving strong reasons why there should be good roads in San Mateo County. We indorse all that Journal says. Good roads is the best advertisment any county could have. Roads cannot be constructed from the Township funds as there is raised in taxes a little more than enough to keep them in repair. The only feasible way is to bond the county for a large sum and expend it judiciously. The increase in taxes would pay off the bonds in a short time. This county is the natural outlet to greater San Francisco,it is the natural suburb and City people will make their home here but we must give them the conveniences that are offered by other localities. We know of nothing that would attract he home seeker quicker than good highways.

MR. CHASE LITTLEJOHN THE RIGHT MAN

Chase Littlejohn, who aspires to be State Fish and Game Commissioner is well qualified for the position. He is a true sportsman and one who will do his wholeduty at all time. If appointed he would see to it that the game laws would be enforced and poachers and those shooting game out of season punished. There is no better man for the place and Governor Gillett would make a wise appointment in selecting Mr. Littlejohn as commissioner.

TESSIE THE WAITRESS.

The Reason That Faithful No. 12 Took a Day Off.

Like the fated duchess in Browning's poem, Tessie smiled upon all men. No matter how intricate the order or how many times you sent things back, she never grumbled. There was always a struggle to get a seat at her table. "The boys" who regularly gathered in the downtown restaurant at half past 12 would wait fifteen minutes for the privilege of being served by Tessie. They joked her a good deal and always were rewarded by a flashing smile and a twinkle of the eye, a bit of repartee or perhaps a little extra attention to their order. But never did one of them presume upon her friendliness and bon camaraderie to overstep the very certain line which she had drawn between herself and those whom she served. She was young, piquant and pretty, but she "mothered" them all, and, no matter how tenderly she might ask if the eggs were just right or the coffee hot, they knew that it was useless to misinterpret that "mothering."

Tessie stayed in the downtown lunch room just three years. From the day she came the manager's discerning eye discovered a prize in her, and from the ladies' table she was promoted to one where masculinity and tips were more frequent. If a waitress were absent, Tessie was always given the "extra" table to serve, and she never complained. Tessie was never tardy, never too ill to work, never distrait or careless. Tirelessly she went up and down with her arms full of dishes and food. "The boys" used to speculate sometimes upon Tessie's matrimonial possibilities and hazard guesses as to what they would do when some fellow carried her off to wait on himself exclusively. But in time she became such a fixture that they ceased wondering why such a pretty girl was forced to work in a quick lunch room and gave up the thought that she would ever marry at all.

That is why they were very much surprised one day when they arrived to find no Tessie. Another waitress tried to take her place, but nobody got what he wanted, and nothing went right. They had been so used to depending upon Tessie's suggestions and her memory that the new waitress had a hard time of it. Finally in a fit of the grouch one of the boys called the manager over.

"Say," he demanded, "where's Tessie?"

The manager lifted his eyebrows politely.

"Tessie?" he began. "Oh, you mean No. 12. She will be back tomorrow."

The next morning Tessie appeared as usual. The crowd of young clerks greeted her with a whoop.

"Where have you been?" they demanded.

Tessie looked at them for a moment. Her fingers gripped the edge of the table, and two big tears rose to her eyes.

"I—I stayed home yesterday," she said chokingly, "to—to go to my husband's funeral."

The clerks looked at one another blankly.

"Your husband!" exclaimed somebody.

"Yes," said Tessie simply. "He's dead. He had been ill three years—consumption." And then she hurried away to the kitchen to give her orders and wipe her tear stained face.—New York Press.

Marrying an Opera Company.

The late "Aunt" Louisa Eldridge, meeting a reporter on one of the New York papers, learned that Lillian Russell was to be married to Signor Perugini.

"Isn't she clever?" quoth Mrs. Eldridge. "Why, she first married a leader of the orchestra, then a composer of comic operas, and now she will wed a tenor. Bless my heart! If she keeps on, she'll have an entire operatic outfit of her own."

How Clark Received the Gift.

Broken by ill health and bowed down by disappointment, Clark retired to private life in bitterness of soul and passed his remaining twenty-three years of crapulous existence in obscurity and poverty. Friends called attention to Clark's sad condition a few years before he died, and the legislature of Virginia grandiloquently acknowledged his great services and sent him a jeweled sword. The old hero's anger was aroused. "When Virginia needed a sword I gave her one," he exclaimed to the messenger. "She now sends me this toy. I want bread." And he thrust the blade of the costly gift into the ground and broke it at the hilt. —Lyman Tew Sprague, in "George Roberts Clark and His Conquest of the Middle West," in Outing Magazine.

Notice of Hearing of Petition

Notice of hearing of petition to discontinue, abandon, and close "Adair" Ave., E st., F st., G st. and portion of First st., Second st., Third st., and Fourth st.

Notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the Board of Supervisors of the County of San Mateo, State of California, praying that said Board order the discontinuance, abandonment and closing of that certain avenue and those certain streets known as and called Adair ave., E st., F st., and G st., and the whole thereof and to discontinue, abandon and close all that portion of First st., Second st., Third st., and Fourth st., laying north of the San Francisco and San Jose railroad, as said avenue and streets and said portions of streets are shown and delineated on that map or plat of "Town of Baden—at Baden Station, San Mateo County, Cal., which said map or plat is recorded in Map Book 1, page 34, records of said County of San Mateo, to which said map or plat and said record thereof reference is hereby made and the same made a part hereof.

And it appearing to said Board from said petition that the prayer thereof should be granted,

It Is Ordered by said board that all persons interested be and appear before said board on Monday the 4th day of March, 1907, at the hour of ten o'clock A.M., at which time said petition will be considered by said board and any person objecting to the discontinuance, abandonment and closing of said avenue and said streets and the portions hereinbefore mentioned, will be heard in support of his objections.

By order of the Board of Supervisors made this 4th day of February, A. D. 1907.

Death of Frank H. Merrill

Frank H. Merrill died at the home of his son George A. Merrill in Wellesley Park Sunday last, at the age of 73 years. The deceased came to California in 1869, being one of the passengers on the first train that was run over the Central Pacific railroad. For a time he engaged in mining of pumice stone. Later he was registrar of the U. S. land office, and thereafter was employed in the San Francisco post office for many years.

He was a native of Maine, his ancestors being among the earliest settlers of that state. In 1861 he enlisted in he 17th. U. S. Infantry and served throughout the war, being engaged principally in the battles before Petersburg. He was a charter member of the Geo. H. Thomas Post No. 2 G. A. R., and for many years he was a trustee of the First Free Baptist church of San Francisco.

His wife died seven years ago, but all his children survive him they being ex-Assemblyman Albert H. Merrill, of Mountain View; Fred T. Merrill, of San Francisco; George A. Merrill, principal of the Lick and Wilmerding schools; and Mrs. Mary M. Miller, wife of George B. Miller, principal of the Cogswell Polytechnic College. He left also 12 grandchildren and one great-grand child.

He was apparently in good health up to the eve of hisdeparture, being a remarkably rugged and well preserved man. His death was sudden and without suffering, resulting from a stroke of apoplexy. The funeral services were held in San Francisco yesterday, under the auspices of the G. A. R., and his remains were interred beside those of his wife in Greenlawn cemetery.

Will of W. L. Davis Filed

The last will and testament of W. L. Davis, deceased, was filed in the Superior Court for probate Monday by Attorney Thorp. The will was executed in 1903. It was written wholly by Mr. Davis and is in the following brief and concise terms.

I, W. L. Davis, being of sound mind do publish this my last will and testament. To my beloved wife, Bertina Davis, I give and bequeath all my property of whatever kind, both real and personal of which I may be possessed at the time of my death. I purposely omit my beloved children, William T., Grace and Irene Davis from any share in the property, knowing that their mother will act rightly by them.

I appoint my wife Bertina Davis, executrix of this will and she is authorized to sell or dispose of the property as she deems best without any order of Court. No bonds shall be required of her.

Any and all other wills heretofore made are hereby revoked.

This is written in whole by myself dated and signed by my hand.

Dated Redwood City, California May 12th, 1903. W. L. DAVIS.

The estate consists wholly of a substantial bank account, which with real property previously deeded to Mrs. Davis, make sa total valuation of about $25,000.

Mrs. Davis has petitioned for letters testamentary and the mater will be heard by the court on Tuesday,

Change in Game Laws

Extend The Limit in Ducks and Deer

DEER SEASON LENGTHENS FROM JULY 1ST TO SEP. 15TH

Sacramento, February 15, 1907,—The Senate spent the greater part of yesterday afternoon in the consideration of Senator Lynch's new code of fish and game laws, which bill was called up for second reading. Several important amendments were submitted and after a quarrel between the hunters of duck and the pursuers of deer, the bag limit of the feathered fowl was reduced to thirty-five, while an amendment by Sunford, and adopted upon roll-call, gives the hunter the right to kill three deer each year instead of two. Victory rested with the riflemen.

Belshaw, of Contra Costa county, sought to have laws that would allow an unlimited slaughter of ducks, while he classed Sanford, Leavitt and other deer hunters as "game hogs" because they wanted more than two deer every twelvemonth. Leavitt and Belshaw engaged in a wordy argument, which finally became personal, in a friendly way. The amendment was adopted, in spite of the duck-hunters' objection which, Leavitt said, "resolved itself into one thing, that the duck hunters want all the ducks they can get and they don't want any deer and they don't want anyone else to have them."

Senator Walker proposed an amendment allowing the hunting or tracking of deer with hounds, but by two votes it waslost. He then bided his time and a litle later submitted another amendment which allows the tracking of deer for three hours, with dogs. This carried by a close vote, and practically annuls the section in Lynch's bill making it a misdemeanor to use dogs in the hunting of deer.

Lynch asked to amend his own bill by inserting a clause that would make the deer season open on July1 and close on September 15, on be exactly one month earlier in opening and closing than at present. The amendment was lost, as it was held that it would affect he animals during their breeding season.

Coming The Majestic Co

The coming of the Majestic Co. is a theatrical event of more than usual importance as it is thoroughly metropolitian attraction compriseing some of the best known players that have been identified with the best stock companies of this coast. Miss Virginia Brissac, the leading lady will be pleasantly remembered as one of the principal members that composed the Alcazar and Majestic Theatre Companies of San Francisco; she was also a prominent member of the Florence Roberts Company.

The repertoire to be presented here is exceedingly attractive as it is a series of important success that have one unstinted praise. The productions without the exception are adequately mounted and produced on a scale of magnificients heretofore unapproached by popular priced companies.

The repertoire will be presented as follows: Tuesday evening "The Senator s Daughter," Wednesday, "A Womans Revenge" Thursday, "Chums Friday, "Broken Hearts," and Saturday afternoon children's grand prize matinee, concluding Saturday evening with the "Texas Ranger."

Seats now on sale at Ryan's Drug Store.

MUST APPOINT CITY CLERK.

The Senate on the 7th inst., gave its support to Senator George S. Walker's bill on county government making the office of town clerk in cities of the sixth class appointive instead of elective. This was one of Senator Walker's pet measures as he believes that the position of town clerk being merely clerical a more competent man can be secured when it is the duty of the Board of Trustees to fill the office. This measure, if it becomes a law, will affect the cities of Santa Clara, East San Jose, Los Gatos, Gilroy, Redwood City Morgan Hill, Palo Alto, Mayfield, Sunnyvale and other regularly incorporated town of that class in the State.

DEATH SUMMONS PIONEER RESIDENT

THOMAS SEAL, LAND OWNER AND CAPITALIST DIES AT HIS HOME IN SOUTH PALO ALTO

Located in California in Early Fifties and Still Held Large Amount of Land in South Palo Alto

Thomas Seale, pioneer land owner and capitalist of the Santa Clara valley, died Tuesday evening at 8:30 at the family home in South Palo Alto, after an intermittent illness of several years.

The funeral services took place at the family residence yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, the Rev. D. Chas. Gardner officiating. The body was then taken on the 11:45 train to San Francisco and placed in a receiving vault at Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Thomas Seale was born in Ireland in 1826, coming to this country in the early 50's. He first located in San Francisco and purchase the large tract of land of which South Palo Alto is a part, but which originally extended from San Francisquito creekto the Seale homestead as it is at present. He often told of riding through Menlo Park on horseback and halting to watch the building of the fence and large gate around the old Menlo Park recreation grounds, which were originally planned as a suburban picnic park, the gate of which, still standing, was built in the 60's.

Mr. Seale built the residence in South Palo Alto nearly thirty years ago, and had made his home there since. He was a man of remarkably strong mind up to the illness which afflicted him several years ago, and came of the sturdy Irish stock whose integrity and positive principles were shown in his relations with his family and his fellowmen.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Villains usually get what is coming to them—on the stage.

It too often happens that the only flowers mother gets are those strewn on her grave.

The man who saves money is sure of one thing—he will never find that he made a serious mistake in doing it.

There are some people who pray for patience and then get mad because the fire goes out when they prayed so long.

Perhaps the next time you do what you shouldn't you will have reason to regret you didn't quit with the last time.

If you get along with people you do not like, your friends think you have tact and your enemies accuse you of being "smooth."

No matter how poor a man's memory is about other things, he never forgets the time and place where he once found money on the street.—Atchison Globe.

Jarring Realism.

A popular novelist described at a dinner in New York the difference between realism and romanticism in fiction. "To make my meaning clearer," said the author, "I will take the case of a young man and a girl—sweethearts. The young man, a romanticist, said passionately to his girl, 'Darling, it shall be my life's one purpose to surround you with every comfort and to anticipate and gratify your every wish.' The girl, a realist, smiled faintly as she answered, 'Oh, Jack, how good of you, and all on $9 a week too!'"

THE REAL CHINESE GONG.

It Makes an Uproar as Awful as It Is Astonishing.

By the way, did you ever hear a real Chinese gong? I don't mean a hotel gong, but one of those great moon disks of yellow metal which have so terrible a power of utterance.

A gentleman in Bangor, north Wales, who had a private museum of south Pacific and Chinese curiosities, exhibited one to me. It was hanging amid Fiji spears beautifully barbed with sharks' teeth, which, together with grotesque New Zealand clubs of green stone and Sandwich Island paddles wrought with the baroque visages of the shark god, were depending from the walls; also there were Indian elephants in ivory, carrying balls in their carven bellies, each ball containing many other balls inside it.

The gong glimmered pale and huge and yellow, like the moon rising over a southern swamp. My friend tapped its ancient face with a muffled drumstick, and it commenced to sob like waves upon a low beach. He tapped it again, and it moaned like the wind in a mighty forest of pines. Again, and it commenced to roar, and with each tap the roar grew deeper and deeper till it seemed like thunder rolling over an abyss in the Cordilleras or the crashing of Thor's chariot wheels.

It was awful and astonishing as awful. I assure you I did not laugh at it at all. It impressed me as something terrible and mysterious. I vainly sought to understand how that thin disk of trembling metal could produce so frightful a vibration. He informed me that it was very expensive, being chiefly made of the most precious metals, silver and gold.—From "Life and Letters of Lafcadio Hearn."

CONSCIENCE MONEY.

What the Old Time Publishers Paid From a Sense of Justice.

Some interesting details have been given out lately as to the sums voluntarily paid to British novelists by American publishers before the days of international copyright. Any American firm could reprint at once whatever issued from the English presses, but some publishers arranged with British authors for advance sheets of forthcoming works, thus enabling them to get the start of "piratical" firms which paid the author nothing. It is interesting to observe the occasional disparity between the merit of the book and the price paid. The whole thing was in the nature of a leap in the dark. Often the sum given by the American publisher was really more than the American rights would probably have been worth had it been possible to secure them by copyright. Thus Anthony Trollope got $3,500 for "Sir Harry Hotspur," one of his poorest novels; George Eliot $8,500 for "Daniel Deronda" and Charles Reade $5,000 for "A Woman Hater." No publisher today would pay any such sums for these books if he were permitted to read them before buying.

On the other hand, by way of comparison, the very best books brought their authors only trifling returns from America. Charles Reade received only $250 for "Put Yourself In His Place," $1,000 for "Hard Cash," these being two of his finest novels, and $1,000 for "Love Me Little, Love Me Long." Thackeray got only $750 for "The Newcomes" and $500 for "Henry Esmond." Trollope obtained from the Harpers $125 for "The Bertrams," $250 for "Castle Richmond," $500 for "Phineas Finn," $250 for "The Eustace Diamonds," "Orley Farm," "Lady Anna" and "Ralph the Heir." The $500 for his "Cicero" is fully as much as any American publisher would give today for the copyright of such a book. George Eliot received only $100 for "Adam Bede" and $500 for "Silas Marner." "The Mill on the Floss" brought her $1,500.

Wilkie Collins and Dickens were the most popular authors of the precopyright period, and they fared best of all at the hands of their authorized American publishers. The former drew from this country $1,800 for "The Woman In White," $3,750 each for "The Moonstone" and "Man and Wife" and $3,000 for "Poor Miss Finch." To Dickens the Harpers paid $1,250 for "Little Dorrit," $1,800 for "Bleak House," $5,000 each for "Our Mutual Friend" and "A Tale of Two Cities" and $7,500 for "Great Expectations," this last representing the high water mark of such voluntary payments.—Bookman.

The White Canoe.

In the far north there is a superstition in which the trappers and traders firmly believe even now, that a white canoe, piloted through the heavens by the spirit of an old pioneer, comes for the dying.—Metropolitan Magazine.

When there is a man in the house just sick enough to stay indoors it behooves everybody to walk straight, or there is certain to be trouble.—Somerville Journal.

FELINE FISHERS.

All Cats Apparently Are Not Afraid of the Water.

Judging from my experience, cats, when living near water, are generally fond of fishing. I have personally known three feline fishers. One was a mere acquaintance and used to fish in a trout stream. The other two lived with us and during the summer months used to fish in the lake nearly every evening. They would crouch on the shore and suddenly jump into an advancing wavelet, very frequently bringing out a small fish. When they had kittens, I have sometimes seen them bring up to the house three fish in the space of an hour.

I know of a cat, whose home was in Westmorland, close to a stream, that was a regular and accomplished fisher. She was a half Persian. Her daughter belongs to friends of mine, and I have myself seen this latter watching the goldfish in the children's aquarium, which at that time was open at the top and on a broad window seat. Puss put in one paw and stirred the water violently, then sat down to watch with apparent satisfaction the terror of the fish, which she could not on that occasion reach. Once the family found she had caught one and killed a second, so the aquarium was afterward always covered by wire or net. One of this cat's kittens belonged to me and was for her short life of under a year very dependent on human companionship. She came up to my bedroom frequently the first thing in the morning and always took great interest in the washhand basin, from which she would fish out the sponge or soap, and liked to have her paw in the water. She had to be kept out of the bathroom, as more than once she deliberately jumped into the bath when it had in it a depth of two or three inches of water. If this daughter and granddaughter of the original fisher had lived near water, I think the fishing instinct would have developed, as the three generations all showed a fondness for this element, which cats, as a rule, are supposed to avoid.—London Spectator.

A FIRST NIGHT AUDIENCE.

The Crowd That Makes Up New York's Famous "Deathwatch."

It would be difficult in a line to say just what the character of the first night audience in New York city is. There are the critics, of course, a dozen or so of rather subdued and timorous looking little men who wander lonesomely about, not seeming to have the courage to speak to anybody outside of their own set and who are generally followed by the vengeful glances of some hurt actor.

Aside from the assortment of young millionaires who like the theatrical atmosphere, the main constituency of the first night audience is the "profession" and the allied arts, the criminal lawyers, managers, backers of shows, etc.

In the early part of the season there will always be a number of well known actors and actresses who have not yet gone to work and who are enjoying their vacations, much as the engineer does during his two weeks' rest in August, by spending it at the roundhouse—the theater.

And this in general constitutes the aggregation that has become famous, or infamous, in theatrical circles as the "deathwatch." They are supposed to be a very difficult body of people to please, but, as a matter of personal experience, I have not seen a first night in ten years that has not been riotously and foolishly enthusiastic, no matter how worthless the offering was.

At some of the worst failures of the season I have seen the star called before the curtain a dozen times in the evening, the author and the manager obliged to make speeches of thanks for the "great reception," while the floral tributes gave the whole thing the atmosphere of a hospital on visiting day.—Delineator.

Origin of the Halo.

In the public places in Athens one or two thousand years ago the Greeks set up the statues of their gods and goddesses. To guard against the possibility of the rain staining the marble faces of their masterpieces they used to protect each with a large metal plate at the top of the head. These were mistaken by the preraphaelite painters for emblems of divinity. Accordingly to this day we see around the pictured heads of our Christian saints the curious little ring which is known as the halo.

A Hint For Amateur Jugglers.

The amateur conjurer should, as far as possible, endeavor to juggle only with the ordinary commonplace articles that are invariably at hand. Cards are to be found in almost every house, hats, handkerchiefs, glasses, coins and paper are always handy, and the man who conjures with these with no apparent preparation will both please and mystify his audience much more than he who brings along a bagful of prepared tricks and spends half an hour behind a screen.—Strand Magazine.

Only Reviewed.

A reviewer said to a friend, "I get through, on an average, fifty books a week."

"Good gracious!" said the friend. "How do you manage it? Why, it takes me at least a day to read one book."

"I don't read them," he said. "I review them."

Relief.

Lenders—By the way, that five dollar bill I loaned you— Borroughs—I haven't forgotten, old man. Don't worry. I still have it in mind. Lenders—Yes, but don't you think it's about time you relieved your mind?—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Obliging Bankrupt.

Good comradeship may count for much. No man ever typified this better than the Wall street broker who said to his friend the reporter: "I did not fail until after the evening papers went to press, so that you could have it all to yourself in the morning. Come around in an hour or so and I'll give you the figures."

A sharp tongue is the only edged tool that grows keener with constant use.—Irving.

Peacocks For Food.

The peacock cannot well be recommended as a market bird—it is too tender in early youth, too slow in reaching maturity. But as a choice rarity, the crown and capsheaf of a country gentleman's feast, it is unapproached and unapproachable. This was well understood throughout the age of chivalry; hence the knightly oath, "By the peacock, the heronshaw and the ladies!" Whoever swore thus was trebly bound to keep his vow. Turkeys had not yet come out of the western world to conquer a place among the "noble" birds which alone were held worthy of being served to royalty. The swan and the peacock were the chiefest of them and bore rule even beyond the days of Queen Elizabeth. At the Christmasings the peacock came in in state, the same as the boar's head and the brawn.—Country Life In America.

Stanley the Explorer.

Although the fever of African exploration did not seize upon Henry M. Stanley until after he found Livingstone, when the example set by the latter fired the Welshman's ambitions, there can be little doubt that Stanley was a born explorer. Otherwise he would scarcely have been able to accomplish those arduous journeys which enabled him to fill up an enormous blank in the map of Africa. Stanley's discoveries were of the greatest political importance and led to the founding, among other things, of what is now the Kongo Free State. His ultimate discovery of Emin Pasha furnished a magnificent illustration of Stanley's indomitable courage and perseverance.—London Mail.

A Royal Slip.

Considerable amusement was once caused by a slip of Emperor Nicholas' pen in accepting the offers of several companies of Siberian militia who volunteered for service at the front. The petition read, "We humbly lay at your majesty's feet our desire to be permitted to fight and die for the fatherland." The emperor in accepting wrote on the margin of the petition in his own hand, "I thank you sincerely and hope your wishes may be fully realized."

The Wasted Witticism.

"I always thought," said the hostess, "that Scotchmen were humorous. Last night I showed a departing Scotch guest a great pile of overcoats in the dressing room.

"'Here,' I said, with a wave of my hand, 'you are the first to leave. Take your choice.'

"'Thank you,' said he as he fumbled searchingly among them, 'I'll 'ave me own.'"—New York Press.

A Legal Remedy.

Hostess — Were you seasick coming across, dear? Miss Pert—Oh, no! You see, papa was with us. Hostess—But what has that to do with your not being seasick? Miss Pert — Well, you know, papa is a judge, and he overruled the motion.—Boston Transcript.

A Custom Born of the Superstition of the Ancients.

The burning of people in effigy has come from a foolish superstition of the ancients, who believed that by burning a likeness of a person they were inflicting pain upon the individual himself. Theocritus tells us that the Greek sorcerers killed their enemies by magic rites performed over the effigy of the person who had offended them, and Virgil also makes mention of this.

In the days of witchcraft and persecution one of the most common charges against witches was that they made waxen images of their enemies which they melted before a fire and thus caused the dissolution of the originals.

The Japanese still regard the effigy as a means of punishment of faithless lovers, and in France to the time of the first revolution execution by effigy was a legal rite. In the Netherlands the same illogical custom prevailed, and the different religions burned the effigies of each other's leaders with zeal. In England the burning of effigies was also practiced, as it was later in America.

No doubt from the ancient custom of burning the effigy arose the idea of placing the wax figures of eminent men in Westminster abbey. In olden times upon the death of a celebrity a waxen figure representing him fully dressed as in life was made and carried in the rear of the funeral procession. After the service the effigy was set up in the church as a temporary monument, and during the time it was on exhibition it was customary to paste or pin pieces of paper containing complimentary epitaphs upon it. The royal figures in Westminster abbey date back to the fourteenth century.—New York Tribune.
